

Secretary William S. Cohen

Since the DRI was launched, we have made genuine progress by –

Consolidating organizations; Streamlining infrastructure; Competing more jobs with the private sector than ever before, and, Re-engineering our business practices.

In addition to improving the quality of our business practices, we are fully committed to improving the quality of life for our forces and their families.

We have one of the world's largest organizations. We want to turn it into a truly world class supporter of our men and women in uniform and we believe we're on the right track to do that.

Defense reform is one of my highest priorities. I ask that it remain one of your highest priorities as well.

REACHING EVERY CORNER OF THE DEPARTMENT

The DRI is reaching every corner of the Department.

Streamlining acquisitions – and opening the door to a far wider scope of solutions and technologies, especially in the private sector – to give our warfighters the latest technologies faster than ever.

Transforming logistics to provide those warfighters with the right parts and supplies at the right time.

Overhauling financial management operations with estimated savings of some one billion dollars.

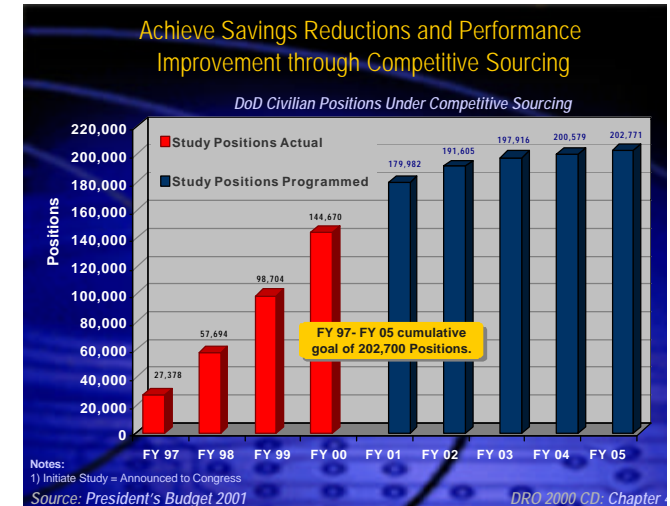

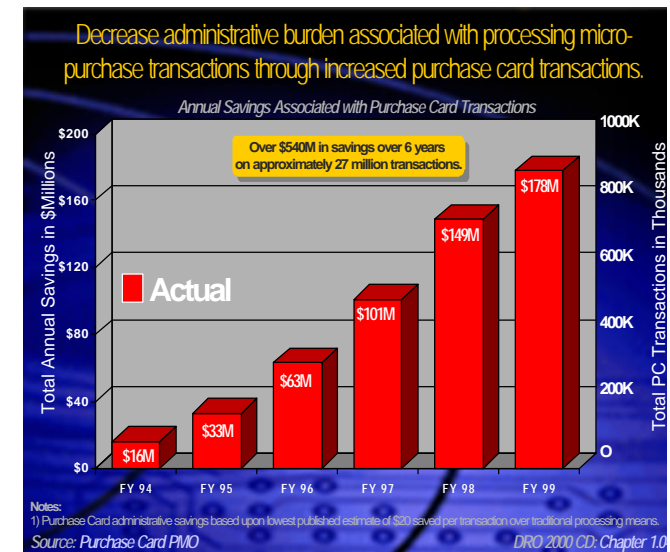

Acquiring and using Public Key Infrastructure that meets the Department's requirement for all Information Assurance services, and

Improving the quality of life for our military forces and their families

PERFORMANCE SCORECARDS

Establishing and measuring milestones sets the Defense Reform Initiative (DRI) apart from other reform efforts of the past.

Creating meaningful and tough performance measures for virtually every DRI initiative underscores the Department's commitment to genuine and lasting change.
